Introduction

As part of our student wellness and life skills program, a session on Body Change, Hygiene & Personal Safety was conducted to educate students about the physical and emotional changes during puberty, the importance of personal hygiene, recognizing safety boundaries, and fostering self-confidence and body autonomy.

2. Objective

- To explain bodily changes during puberty in an age-appropriate manner.
- To emphasize the significance of hygiene and undergarment care.
- To differentiate between good touch and bad touch.
- To educate students about body autonomy and the importance of trusted adults.
- To encourage modesty, confidence, and self-expression.
- To prepare students for puberty-related physical and emotional developments.

3. Methodology

Participants: 42 students from Grade 3 & Grade 4

Session Format: Interactive talk with visual aids, Q&A discussion, and anonymous feedback forms

Topics Covered:

- Bodily changes and hygiene practices
- Safety boundaries and types of touch
- Speaking up confidently and seeking help from trusted adults
- The puberty talk: physical, emotional, and social changes

4. Key Discussion Points

Category	Subtopics
Body Change & Hygiene	• Explaining bodily changes • Importance of hygiene • Undergarment care
Personal Safety Boundaries	• Good touch vs bad touch • Body autonomy • Trusted adults
Modesty & Confidence	• Speak up for yourself • Raising voice against discomfort • The puberty talk

5. Observations

- Students showed keen interest and curiosity, particularly in understanding the difference between healthy and unsafe behavior.
- Many participants actively shared examples and asked insightful questions.
- Some students appeared unaware of basic hygiene and body safety practices, indicating a need for continued awareness.

6. Recommendations

- Conduct regular sessions on body changes and emotional development.
- Share take-home resources and visual guides for parents and guardians.
- Establish a safe, confidential reporting channel for students experiencing discomfort.
- Integrate body safety and hygiene topics into regular health education curriculum.

7. Conclusion

The session successfully addressed critical areas of student growth and personal safety. It opened a supportive space for students to learn, express concerns, and build confidence. Continued engagement and reinforcement are essential to empower students through adolescence with awareness and assurance.
